Summary: One-shot, Mericcup. Hiccup finally sees her after a long time and don't resist the urge to hug Princess Merida

Nothing like a throne

Hiccup saw her and how beatiful she was now. She had always been good-looking, but she looked more mature, more fierce and perfect. He couldn't just stop looking at her and, in a second, looking was not enough anymore.

Since he grew up, Hiccup had became more confident with woman cough, cough Astrid cough, cough, and he decided to take advantage on that.

So, he grabbed her, hugged her and spinned around until she stopped screaming to start shouting at him:

-Hiccup, watcha doin'?! Put me down right now!

-I don't think so, Princess Merida. teasing You look like someone who should be kissed!

And, since he couldn't hold it back anymore, he finally kissed her, full on the mouth. All the years without her, all the pain he felt, all the loss and everything else was on that kiss.

She also gave up to it, not caring about rules or her mind, just enjoying being at long last in his arms.

-So, what were you saying before?

-I...uhum...just...

She had no words, probably for the first time in her life.

-Put me down, Hiccup. Let me breath!

-Does that means that we are dating?

-N-

-Well, then I think this wee lassie doesn't need to go to the ground.
A bonny princess deserves a wee throne like me, donthcha' think?
